7.1. Assessment criteria for the final qualifying work (FQW)

The evaluation of the result of the undergraduate FQW defense is carried out in a closed session of the state committee. The following criteria are taken as the basis:

- Relevance of the topic;
- Scientific and practical significance of the topic;
- Validity and reasoning of the conclusions reached;
- The presentation of the work and the style of presentation of the material;
- The quality of the presentation of the student;
- The content of the student's content;
- The content and reasoning of the learner's answers to the questions asked in the discussion.

The overall assessment of the FQW is determined by taking into account the feedback from the scientific supervisor, external review and evaluation of the FQW. The results of the graduation qualification are determined by scores on a five-point scale:

The "Excellent" assessment is a deep and reasoned justification of the topic; clear formulation and understanding of the problem being studied; wide and adequate use of relevant scientific literature and applied linguistic methods of analysis of the material of the study; presented the ability to identify shortcomings of used theories and make generalizations on the basis of individual linguistic phenomena. The content of the study and the progress of the defense indicate the existence of skills in the work of a graduate in this field. The layout of the text of the FQW with the availability of an extended bibliography meets existing requirements. The scientific supervisor's review and the external review are positive. The defense of graduation qualification work demonstrated the high degree of linguistic preparation of the graduate student and his inclination to scientific research.

For papers that qualify for the "excellent" grade, it is mandatory for a graduate student to complete such types of research work (R&D) as preparing a scientific publication (scientific article) on the topic of research and participating with a report in a scientific-practical conference.

The "Good" assessment is a reasoned justification of the topic; clear formulation and understanding of the problem being studied; use of sufficient number of specialized sources for scientific research. The work is based on an average depth of analysis of the problem being studied, and a small number of generalizations have been made. The content of the study and the progress of the defense of graduation qualification work indicate the practical skills of the graduate in this field. The WRG is well-designed, with the necessary bibliography. Feedback from the research director and external reviews are positive. The progress of defense of graduation qualification work showed sufficient scientific preparation of the graduate student.

The "Satisfactory" rating is a sufficient justification for the chosen topic, but lacks a deep understanding of the problem at hand. References in the bibliography are mostly to standard literary sources. The scientific papers needed for a comprehensive study of the problem are used in limited quantities. Insufficient degree of competence of the graduate in the field of research. Some errors in the design of the VCD. The scientific supervisor's review and the external review are positive, but contain a number of observations. The protection of graduation qualification work showed satisfactory professional training of the graduate in research activities.

Evaluation "Unsatisfactory" is the subject of the graduate qualification work of a graduate student is presented in general. Limited number of scientific sources used in the bibliography. A standard presentation. Having a dogmatic approach to the theories and concepts used. Judgments about the problem being studied are not always competent. Inaccuracies and incorrect conclusions on the used special literature and analyzed linguistic material. Formalization of the graduate qualification work of a master student with elements of noticeable deviations from the accepted requirements. Feedback from the research director and external review with significant comments. During the defense of the graduation qualification, the student showed limited scientific competence.

The results of the defense of the graduate qualification work of a master are documented in the established procedure by the minutes of the state assessment committee. The State Certification Commission decides to grant the relevant qualification to the graduate, as well as recommends the final qualification work for practical implementation or publication, assigns the graduate of the master's program to a postgraduate course and issue a diploma with honors. The decision is formalized by special meetings / protocols.
